A 42-year-old female with no history of liver disease presented with jaundice. Serum biochemistry revealed renal dysfunction and liver dysfunction. Renal failure was diagnosed with renal biopsy and histopathologic examination. Acute hepatitis E was diagnosed by liver biopsy. Renal failure in a patient with acute hepatitis E has rarely been reported. The present case showed that the renal function of a patient with hepatitis E worsened rapidly. Renal failure is not a rare complication of acute hepatitis E and it is important to make an early diagnosis and start adequate treatment. Aurantimonas odontotermitis sp. nov., isolated from termite nests. A Gram-stain-negative, non-motile, non-sporulating, rod-shaped bacterium, designated strain QH5T, was isolated from a termite nest in the desert of Guarino in Egypt. Growth occurred at 20-45 °C and pH 5.0-11.0 (optimum 37 °C and pH 7.0). Strain QH5T was able to grow in the presence of 0.5-20 % (w/v) NaCl (optimum 2.0 %). The cells contained Q-10 as the predominant respiratory quinone and C12 : 0 cycloω8c as the predominant fatty acid. The major polar lipids were phosphatidylethanolamine, one unknown aminophospholipid and one unknown phospholipid. The DNA G+C content of strain QH5T was 49.2 mol%. Strain QH5T was related phylogenetically to the genus Aurantimonas, showing 16S rRNA gene sequence similarity of 94.4 % to the type strains of Aurantimonas species, with Aurantimonas arboris LMG 23290T as the closest phylogenetic relative. On the basis of its phenotypic and chemotaxonomic characteristics, strain QH5T represents a novel species in the genus Aurantimonas, for which the name Aurantimonas odontotermitis sp. nov. is proposed. The type strain is QH5T (=KCTC 62187T=NBRC 110764T). Nasal muc
