During a transplant, a healthy, healthy organ is removed from a donor, and placed into the body of a recipient. In some cases, a donor's organ can be partially transplanted; this is called "partial transplant." It may be performed when the organ donor is too ill to donate or when the organ is damaged or damaged. The procedure is performed to replace the failed organ with a healthy donor organ. The life of a patient is improved dramatically. In fact, more than 100,000 people in the United States receive transplantations each year. Transplantation is the life-saving gift of a loving heart or organ donor. A 2d92ce491b
