KEYMACRO uses a powerful smart algorithm and you can assign different key shortcuts to any command that you want to execute. It's an excellent solution for programmers. You can create macros for yourself. Its an extremely easy-to-use program. You don't have to be an expert or programmer to use it. Just drag and drop the menu or command you want to activate and the program will automatically assign a shortcut key to it. Keymacro can be added to any application. You can create a Macro for Firefox, for example, and it will create a key for a link. It allows you to assign key shortcuts to any command and it supports a wide variety of languages and features. It allows you to create keys for most of the basic features, like showing the menu and typing. It comes with three different interfaces, one for beginners, one for power users and one for programmers. There is also an extensive manual on how to use the program. Extensive features The program sports over 40 different features, including a sort of manual for using the program, a key commander, and a configuration editor. You can specify keyboard commands for: starting a program, maximizing a window, creating a link, changing directory, copying text, creating and editing a file, printing a document, moving a file, opening a document, running a command, searching and viewing files, searching online, navigating web pages, copying the clipboard, emailing, and deleting. You can add different files to macros and you can assign key shortcuts to functions like launching new windows, to a file explorer or to an Internet browser. It allows you to control the appearance of the program and you can choose from different themes. Its features can be easily configured using its advanced configuration editor. The keys are configurable and you can choose from: double, triple or single characters, numbers, special characters and parentheses. This program can be a good choice for programmers because it's simple, elegant, easy to use and it has a lot of features.
