That's all for now. I will see you soon in the next post. New Target 3001 2018 Serial. Anatomical study of the right adrenal vein and its relation to the inferior vena cava. The inferior vena cava (IVC) and the retrohepatic portion of the adrenal vein (AV) are situated deep in the retroperitoneum and are therefore difficult to dissect in cadavers. The aim of this study was to demonstrate the origin, course and anatomical relationship of the AV to the IVC by dissection. The incisura sinistra of the IVC was divided into superior, middle and inferior portion. The median distance from the anterior surface of the vena cava to the right adrenal vein was measured at these three levels. We also assessed the relationship between the AV and other surrounding structures. The retrohepatic portion of the AV is divided into two tributaries and is situated in close proximity to a part of the ascending lumbar aorta. The median distance from the anterior surface of the vena cava to the right adrenal vein was significantly shorter in the middle and inferior portions. The inferior end of the right hepatic vein, the right portal vein, the renal vein and renal artery were anterior to the right adrenal vein. We found that the retrohepatic portion of the AV is located in close proximity to the aorta and the lumbar vertebrae. The anterior aspect of the right adrenal vein can be dissected easier after the cephalic portion of the adrenal vein is completely dissected, and this maneuver avoids unnecessary injury to the adrenal gland and the liver.
